Helping People Pick Up The Pieces

By David I. Roberts, President/CEO, Lutheran Homes Society

Sometimes traditional assistance programs simply let deserving people fall through bureaucratic cracks.

It is at times like these that Lutheran Homes Society Family and Youth Services professionals step in to help people pick up the pieces of their troubled lives.

As Christians, we recognize a continuing need for assistance, especially among families, youth, and children. We feel inspired to do what we can to strengthen the individual and the family through care, treatment, and abiding concern for those we serve.

Through this program we provide community-based residential care and treatment to high-risk youth. We strive to meet the needs of those youth in open settings, and we employ a high staff-to-youth ratio. We provide an integrated service delivery system that includes an emphasis on family relationships and education.

We maintain a no-eject commitment to seriously disturbed children and youth who have histories of multiple failed placements, administrative discharge from institutional settings, involvement with juvenile court systems, and repeated hospitalization.

We operate 24 hours per day, seven days per week.

We receive referrals and placements from Ohio and Northern Indiana. Sources include local county mental health boards, juvenile courts, public children service agencies, human services departments, hospitals, private insurers, and others.

Every year the various ministries of Lutheran Homes Society serve over 2,300 area children and adults. For nearly 150 years Lutheran Homes Society has had one simple message, "Everyone Deserves A Home."
