When is it Time to Move?

By David I. Roberts, President/CEO, Lutheran Homes Society

Seniors have been asking that question for as long as one can remember.

For many young-at-heart seniors, choosing to move to a community with a full continuum of care is the perfect choice.

Such supportive housing options provide seniors with the opportunity to enjoy an active lifestyle, find the appropriate health care support, when and if it is needed, while living in the same community with their friends and neighbors.

These retirement communities, such as Lutheran Village at Wolf Creek and Lutheran Home at Napoleon, offer full independent living for active adults in a dynamic suburban location. As the need arises, assisted living and long-term nursing care are available "on campus."

In addition to retirement communities, millions of senior Americans now live in federally subsidized housing.

Seniors considering a move need to be aware of a number of options. They may want to locate near family and friends, churches, and shopping areas. Some seniors will need to evaluate services such as transportation, home health care, and home delivery of meals. Decisions on these options and needed services will help seniors determine when it is time to move.
